California State University, Sacramento

California State University, Sacramento offers a life-changing opportunity for our students, preparing them to be leaders in their fields and communities. Our professors are known for their dedication to great teaching. And our students benefit from studying and living in California's capital city.

Sacramento State is a vibrant metropolitan university that is among the largest campuses in the California State University system. We enroll a multicultural student body of more than 28,000, and graduate about 6,000 students each year. Despite our size, quality teaching in small classes remains a top priority. Students enjoy personalized attention from their professors, as well as extensive research and internship opportunities in Sacramento, the heart of California government.

Sacramento State remains one of the nation's best higher education values, with student fees among the lowest in the nation. About half of our students receive some form of financial assistance.

Our students choose from numerous fields of study. We offer a strong and diverse academic curriculum that includes 60 undergraduate programs and 40 graduate programs, as well as two joint doctorates. Our larger programs include teacher education, business, computer technology, criminal justice, psychology and communication studies. In addition, numerous offerings such as the Honors Program help students meet others with similar interests and develop strong ties with professors. Among our programs linked to state government is the highly competitive Capital Fellows Program, in which graduate students work as full-time staff in the legislative, executive or judicial branch.

Preparing for a career is a vital part of a Sacramento State education. We have one of the largest cooperative education program in California, placing students in paid positions where they receive academic credit. Hundreds of other students participate in business- and government-related internships. One in three Sacramento State students work as volunteers – many through a service learning project in class—gaining valuable work experience while helping their community. Our Career Center helps students both with finding a career interest and with job searches, providing job databases and sponsoring an on-campus recruiting program.

Outside the classroom, Sacramento State students lead active lives. There are campus-sponsored arts programs, speeches, debates, comedy shows and concerts throughout the year, and plenty of cultural and entertainment opportunities in the surrounding area. More than half the University's students join at least one of 250 student organizations, and thousands participate in the intramural sports program. About 400 intercollegiate athletes compete at the Division I level.

We're particularly proud of our beautiful 300-acre campus, with its lush landscaping and 3,000 trees. Miles of trails stretch along the nearby American River Parkway, linking our campus and student housing with recreational areas such as Folsom Lake and Old Sacramento.

The city of Sacramento is one of the state's most affordable big cities, and the area has a relaxed and friendly atmosphere. The region's mild climate, rivers and nearby recreation areas make it popular with outdoor enthusiasts. It hosts the world's largest traditional jazz festival each Memorial Day weekend, and popular attractions include the State Capitol building, the State Railroad Museum and the Crocker Art Museum. Within easy driving distance are San Francisco, the Napa and Sonoma valleys, the historic gold country and the Lake Tahoe region's ski slopes.

Sacramento State is looking to the future with a major campus initiative—Destination 2010—designed to make this a premier metropolitan university and a destination campus for the West. Current students, as well as future students, will benefit from the changes and improvements to our academic program, student services and facilities. Included in the planning are a large student recreation center, an arena and stadium upgrades within our Alex G. Spanos Sports Complex, which was the site of the 2000 and 2004 U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials. Construction for a large new residence hall started in Fall 2007. University Mission and Strategic Planning

California State University, Sacramento is an integral part of the community, committed to access, excellence and diversity.

California State University, Sacramento is dedicated to the life-altering potential of learning that balances a liberal arts education with depth of knowledge in a discipline. We are committed to providing an excellent education to all eligible applicants who aspire to expand their knowledge and prepare themselves for meaningful lives, careers, and service to their community.

Reflecting the metropolitan character of the area, California State University, Sacramento is a richly diverse community. As such, the University is committed to fostering in all its members a sense of inclusiveness, respect for human differences, and concern for others. In doing so, we strive to create a pluralistic community in which members participate collaboratively in all aspects of university life.

California State University, Sacramento is committed to teaching and learning as its primary responsibility. In both the academic and student support programs, success is measured in terms of student learning. In addition, the University recognizes the vital connections between pedagogy and learning, research activities and classroom instruction, and co-curricular involvement and civic responsibility. All students, regardless of their entering levels of preparation, are expected to complete their degree programs with the analytical skills necessary to understand the social, economic, political, cultural, and ecological complexities of an increasingly interconnected world.

Located in the capital of the nation's most populous and diverse state, California State University, Sacramento is dedicated to advancing the many social, economic, political, and scientific issues affecting the region and the state. The University's curricular and co-curricular programs continue to focus on these issues through undergraduate and post-baccalaureate programs that prepare graduates for successful careers dedicated to public service and the enhancement of the quality of life within the region and the state. Our research centers and much of our individual scholarly efforts also remain directed at the enhancement of the quality of life within the region and the state.

At California State University, Sacramento, we are constantly striving to create a sense of unity among faculty, staff, administrators, students, alumni, and community members. In pursuing the combined elements of our mission, we seek to foster a sense of pride in all who view this campus as their own – pride in Sacramento State as the institution of choice among our current students; pride among our alumni in the ongoing impact of the Sacramento State education upon their lives; pride among faculty, staff, and administration in their University's achievement of excellence in teaching, learning, and scholarship; and pride in Sacramento State as an asset to the community among residents of the Greater Sacramento region.

Our Mission

California State University, Sacramento commits itself to providing Access for all eligible students, continually pursuing Excellence in teaching, learning, and support, building upon our already exceptional Diversity such that all members of our community are respected and participate collaboratively in every aspect of University life, enhancing the quality of life in the Region and the state, and instilling Pride in all who view this campus as their own.

Our Vision

California State University, Sacramento will be known throughout and increasingly beyond the Sacramento Region for its excellent and comprehensive academic and co-curricular student programs. We will be a key partner in developing the highly diverse "New California." We will recruit the best faculty and staff and utilize the best in teaching and learning technology. We will be recognized as a beautiful and inviting regional destination. We will be a source of pride for and increasingly enjoy the support of the Greater Sacramento Region.

Our Core Values

Against this backdrop, in Spring 2007, SPC initiated the University's strategic planning process through a focus upon the values of the campus community. Through general forum and other community feedback, SPC fashioned a "core values" document against which strategic planning and other planning and policy efforts can be studied and evaluated.

Strategic Priorities

- Implement a strategically focused, campus-wide effort to improve recruitment, retention, and graduation rates.
- Create and sustain an organizational structure and culture that facilitates evidence-based decision-making and purposeful planning in all important endeavors.
- Enhance campus-wide engagement in and responsibility for the resolution of complex issues and in the planning and implementation of campus policies.
- Build a creative and vibrant learning community derived from the strength and vitality of our diverse campus.
- Identify and develop interdisciplinary and cross-divisional initiatives with the greatest potential to strengthen our role as an engaged partner in the region.
