GENERAL EDUCATION

The General Education Program is vital to the overall mission of California State University, Sacramento. The broad range of subject matter and skills encompassed by the Program prepare CSUS graduates to live personally rewarding lives while serving others.

The General Education Program is designed to:

- provide knowledge, skills, experiences and perspectives which enable students to make connections among disciplines; and
- expand their capacities to take part in a wide range of human interests and activities, and confront the personal, moral and social problems that are an inevitable part of human life.

Objectives

Upon completion of the General Education Program requirements, students will be expected to:

- read, write and understand relatively complex and sophisticated English prose,
- construct a non-fallacious verbal argument, recognize fallacious arguments and follow the verbal arguments of others,
- find and use common information resources, engage in specialized library research, use computers and seek out appropriate expert opinion and advice, and
- use mathematical ideas to accomplish a variety of tasks.

In addition to these basic skills, courses in the sciences, arts, humanities and social sciences have been selected to provide students with:

- an understanding of the workings of the physical universe, which will refine their science-based conceptual problem-solving skills and develop a first-hand acquaintance with the methods of science, including a general understanding of hypothesis formation and theory-testing;

- a knowledge of current theories about the origins and varieties of life on this planet, focusing on the basic principles of life processes, the interdependence of creatures in ecological systems, and the effects of changes in the environment;
- an exposure to the historical and cultural influences that have played significant roles in the evolution of the values, beliefs and ideas of Western and non-Western societies, through the study of significant literary, philosophical, and artistic works;
- a familiarity with the theories and methods of the social sciences in order to enhance their understandings of the major institutions in our society, and the roles that both individuals and groups play in shaping experience;
- perspectives on people from various cultures and backgrounds, including awareness of the contributions of non-Western cultures, women, and other ethnic and underrepresented groups to the rich diversity of human activity; and
- an understanding of the current theories and methods used to expand our knowledge of the processes of mental and physical development throughout the human life cycle.

CSUS General Education courses are designed, selected and approved by the faculty to meet these program objectives. Students will benefit from consultation with the Academic Advising Center or advisors in their major departments in planning their General Education course choices. Each year, the available GE courses are listed in the front section of the Class Schedule.

Course Requirements

The following courses have been approved to meet the 51-unit General Education pattern required of CSUS students. In addition, a second semester composition course and demonstration of proficiency in a foreign language are required for graduation. (See page 77 for a description of these requirements.) Students must choose their General Education classes from the Areas and classes listed below:

- All upper division GE courses require at least second semester sophomore standing (45 units) and completion of all GE Area A courses as prerequisites,
- At least nine units must be chosen from upper division GE courses (100-199) and at least nine units must be taken in residence at CSUS. (These units may overlap.)
- The Advanced Studies course may be counted as upper division GE if it is not in the major,
- No upper division units used to meet General Education requirements may be credited toward a major, and no more than three units (either upper or lower division) may be used to satisfy General Education requirements may be credited toward a minor,
- No more than six lower division units from a student's major field may be used to meet General Education requirements,
- No upper division course from a student's major department may be used to meet the 9 unit upper division General Education requirement,
- Each course taken to satisfy the Area A Basic Subjects and Area B4 Quantitative Reasoning must be completed with a grade of C- or higher. A 2.0 cumulative GPA is required in General Education.

Overlap Between General Education and Majors/Minors (Fall 1992 & Later)

General education requirements include five areas (A-E) in which you must take courses (area requirements), a nine-unit upper division requirement, a Race and Ethnicity requirement, and an Advanced Study requirement. The overlap possibilities among these four aspects of General Education are outlined below. Students needing help applying these overlap policies are encouraged to see an advisor in the Academic Advising Center, Lassen Hall 1012 or a degree evaluator in Lassen Hall 1013.

1. The nine unit upper division GE requirement (courses numbered 100-199) cannot be met with courses applied to your major or from your major department. Example: A Criminal Justice major may not under any circumstances use CRJ 193 to meet the nine unit upper division GE requirement. (There is a 3 unit exception to this requirement for the following majors: computer science, engineering, nursing and physical therapy.)
2. GE area requirements (area C1, D2, etc.) can be met with up to six units of courses from your major department. Lower division courses from your major department can be applied to both major and GE area requirements. GE area requirements can also be met with upper division courses from your major department, but not with upper division courses applied to your major. Example: PSYC 134 is not used in meeting major requirements. However, PSYC 134 cannot apply to the nine unit upper division GE requirement (see #1 above).
3. The Race and Ethnicity requirement can be met with an upper or lower division course from your major or major department. Example: A Social Work major can use SWRK 102 to meet the Race and Ethnicity requirement. However, this course will not apply to the nine unit upper division GE requirement.
4. The Advanced Study requirement can be met with a course from the major or major department in specified majors.

Example: an English major can use ENGL 170H to meet the Advanced Study requirement. However, this course will not apply to the nine unit upper division GE requirement.

5. One course, either upper or lower division, can apply to both GE and minor requirements. Example: an Anthropology minor can use ANTH 121 to meet both minor and GE requirements.

Note: For Business Administration majors, substitute "College of Business" for "major department." For Social Science majors, substitute "History" for "major department."

TRANSFER STUDENTS

Transfer students who have completed lower division General Education requirements at a California community college, including those certified under the Intersegmental General Education Transfer Core Curriculum (IGETC), are required to complete 9 units of upper division GE at CSUS and to meet the foreign language proficiency graduation requirement. These 9 units may or may not include the Advanced Studies requirement, depending on the policy of the student's major department. Students who have not completed an approved course for the 'Race and Ethnicity in American Society' category at a community college must take a course in this category at CSUS. In addition, all transfer students, except those fully certified as having completed the IGETC core curriculum, must complete the required sophomore level writing course or an approved course at a community college.

For more information about IGETC requirements, contact your community college counselor.
